TUESDAY, MARCH, 1, 1887.

THE DEAD PRINCESS.

FUNERAL CEREMONIES.

THE SERVICES AT THE PALACE.

A LONG PROCESSION.

The threatening clouds which on Saturday night seemed to promise rain for the morrow, cleared up on Sunday and the morning broke, shewing one of the most perfect days that this climate, famed for its brilliant skies, can give. The occasion was mournful enough. Sunday, February 27, was the day appointed for bearing to the tomb all that was earthly of the late Princess Likelike.

The period that the body had rested in the throne room of the Palace, had been a solemn one, Services had been frequently performed by Bishop Willis and the Rev. Alexander Mackintosh, the guard had ceaselessly waved their sombre kahilis for nearly three weeks, and no hula had marred the solemnity, or grated upon Christian feeling during this watch over the dead.

MORNING PRAYER. At 9:30 a. m., Morning Prayer was read for the last time in the Throne Room. Invitations had been issued to the personal friends of the dead Princess and her husband, the Hon. Archibald Scott Cleghorn and some hundred and fifty of our most prominent citizens were present together with the children of St. Andrews' Priory. As the congregation entered they were shewn to their seats by the Attorney-General. At the head of the tion entered they were shewn to their seats by the Attorney-General. At the head of the coffin sat His Majesty, the Princess Kainlani and the Hon. A. S. Cleghorn, immediately behind them was the Princess Poomaikalani. The Rev. Alexander Mackintosh read the Morning Service of the Episcopal Church. Mr. Wray Taylor, organist of St. Andrews' Cathedral lead the Quartette, consisting of Misses Mary and Bertha von Holt, Mr. T. May and Mr. T. R. Walker. As the officiating clergyman entered a Solemn March was played on the organ. Special psalms were played on the organ. Special psalms were chosen in place of those for the day, conveying that hope of everlasting life which all churches so earnestly teach. The chants were sung, by the quartetie, the congregation joining. The first hymn, "Forever with the Lord" was sung with great sweetness, the second hymn, a native translation of "Nearer my God to Thee" was rendered by a choir of native men, the deep bass of whose voices echoed through the room. The service was most sympathetically performed and many of the spectators were visibly affected by its solemnity, simplicity and deep feeling. Many present had worshipped in the same building with the deceased, had been intimately asso-ciated with her in plane of ciated with her in plans of amusement and in works of charity. The memory of by-gone days arose, the thought of one cut off in her prime came up; and then there was the sympathy felt for the husband and for the last service a neall combined to make this mountful one.

THE FUNERAL CEREMONIES. Precisely at one the funeral service was held .. The invitations to this were confined to the Diplomatic and Consular Corps, the Judges of the Supreme Court, the members of the Privy Council, the members of the House of Nobles and of the Legislature, the Ministry, and other officials of the Government. The dais where sat the King and Queen, H. R. H. Princess Lilicokalana and the Princess Poomaikelani was draped in black, the crimson of the ordinary hangings faintly shining through the sember veil. The coffin occupied the center of the apartment, draped with a heavy black velvet pall, the work of the members of St. Andrew' Priory. On the head of the coffin rested a cushion bearing a massive silver crown. A waved kahilis of like hue over the coffin, the sable plumes ascending and descending and moving from side to side in most perfect time. Bearers holding large kabilis stood at the head and foot of the coffin. Around were ranged tables covered with lovely tropical flowers-lilies, marguerites, stephanotis, plumaria, and white roses. Noticeable among these tributes to the dead were two massive crosses on either side of the coffin, an exquisite pillow of stephanotis, an anchor of white roses, and immediately in front of the clergy an arch of pure white flowers.

ORDER OF PRECEDENCE. At the head of the coffin were the Hou. S. Cleghorn and the Princess Kaiulani. To the right of the Royal family down the room were seated in the front row, the Judiciary which was represented by His Honor the Chief Justice and Justices McCully, Preston and Bickerton, and the members of the Ministry. Behind these came the members of the Legislature. On the left of the dais, the seats were occupied by the members of the Privy Council, of the House of Nobles, the Governors and Governesses of the Islands and the Circuit Judges. Seats were arranged at the lower end of the room, facing the dais. In the front rank was the diplomatic corps, arranged from left to right in the following order: His Excellency G. W. Merrill, U. S. Minister Resident; His ExcellencyJames Hay Wodenouse, Her Britannie Majesty's Com missioner Rnu Consul-General; His Excel lency Henri Feer, Con missioner for the Re public of France; His Excetioney A de Sonza Canavarro, Commissioner for the Kingdom of Portugal and His Excellency Taro Ando, Commissioner for the Empire of Japan

Immediately behind the diplomatic corps came the Consuls, headed by J. H. Patsam United States; F. A. Schaefer Esq. Dean of the Corps, Italy; A. J. Cartwright Esq., Petn; H. Giade Esq., German Empire; J. H. Paty Esq., Belgium and Netherlands; H. Schmidt Esq., Sweden; H. Macfarlane Esq., Denmark; H. W. Laine Esq., Mexico. The British Vice-Consul, T. Rain Walker sat at the head of the next row, together with Goo Kim Esq., Clinese Commercial Agent; Viscount Torrie, of the Japanese Legation and others. Behind these were various Government officials and officers of the Palace. The choir of the second English speaking congregation of St. Andrew's were seated at the lower end of the room, on the left of the dais, immediately behind the harmonium The voices were arranged as follows: So-prano, Misses Bertha Von Holt, Mist, Barnard and Dora Dowsett; Alto, Misses Von Holt, Lamb and Rhodes; Tenor, Messrs T. May, Baird and W. May; Bass, Messrs. Star-key, Crozier and White. Mr. Wray Taylor presided at the organ.

When all were seated the organist played the In Memoriam march composed by him-self for the occasion, and while the solemn strains floated on the scent-laden air the Bishop of Honolula and his clergy entered and took their places at the foot of the coffin. The Bishop was assisted by the Rev. A. Mackintosis, Rev. George Wallace, Rev. W. Barnes and the Rev. H. Gowan. Solomnly came the words "I am the Resurrection and the Life, saith the Lord," as the chords of the foneral music died away and the single voice broke upon the hushed stillness of the room; the last service had commenced. Clearly heard were the beautiful texts open-Clearly heard were the beautiful texts opening the burial service, and after the words "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the Name of the Lord," the well-balanced voices of the choir mournfally broke forth into the chant, "Lord, Thou hast been our refuge." The music had been most appropriately chosen, and the choir rendered it with feeling, the full meaning of the words being beautifully expressed by the softness of the singing in the earlier verses, and the glorious hope typified in the latter verses by a burst of sound. The hymn, "Through all the changing scenes of life," was next sung by the Rawaihau choir. The lesson was read by the Rev. George Wallnes in an impressive manner, and was followed by the hymn, "When our heads are bowed in wee," than which no more touching piece of sacred melody has probably ever been written.

THE LAST JOURNEY,

THE LAST JOURNEY, Slowly the congregation dispersed to the strains of Handel's Dead March in Saul preparatory to the removal of the coffin. The kahili bearers task is nearly over, one last salute and the emblems of Royalty are borne from the room to take their place around the Catafalque. The floral tributes were each taken by the appointed officials, the pull draped in a different manner and then twelve policemen filed in, strong stalwart looking fellows, and hore the coffic from wart looking fellows, and hore the coffin from the Throne Room, through the lofty ball, down the broad steps to the catafalque. The men with the Catafalque moved slowly for-ward, and the boom of the minute guns upon ward, and the boom of the minute gans upon the battery on the slope of Punchbowl, an-nounced that the last journey had com-menced. Boom! boom! for two hours the reports echoed over the city, marking the space of time occupied in traversing the dis-tance between the Palace and the Mausoleum.

THE PROCESSION. Early in the forenoon preparations were being made by the various bodies which were to take places in the procession which was to form in the afternoon—notable among these were the soldiers and the firemen.

THE FORMATION. Hon. J. A. Cammins was the Marshal of the Day, aided by Governor Laukes, Major Hayley, Major Bertelmann, Quartermaster-General Nowlein, and others. At a quarter to one o'clock the various bodies began to to one o'clock the various bodies began to arrive, and commenced to form on King St. That portion which was to precede the catafalque formed west of the Palace gate, with its head resting on Nuuanu street. That which followed formed on the Waikiki side of the King-street gate. The Marshal and his aids had a difficult task to manipulate so large a body and place it in position for the march to the Mausoleum. The complete procession, when formed into line, was one of the largest which has probably ever been seen on a similar occasion in Honoiulu.

The St. Louis College scholars, preceded by their own band, dressed in dark-blue quiforms with brass buttons, presented a fine appearance, keeping step to the music like veterans. The Royal School Cadets also looked well in their light uniforms, and their evolutions showed considerable pro-ficiency in marching and countermarch-ing. The Portuguese Band preceded a small detachment of the Portuguese Society. Then followed the Honolulu Pire Department, which mustered in considerable force—all of the companies being well represented and as usual showing, in point of numbers and general appearance, to advan-tage. The Fire Marshal and Inspecting Engineer followed: Chief Engineer Wilson and 1st and 2d Assistant Engineers Asch and Hustace brought up the rear. Then followed delegations from several of the civic bodies including quite a number from Geo. W De Long Post No. 45 G. A. R., and a small detachment of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. The next notable display was made by the Military—comprising the Household troops and volunteer companies—of which the Honolulu Rifles, under command of Capt. V. V. Ashford, seemed to have the earing of veterans, carrying their arms in proper shape and keeping step, while some of the native volunteers appeared more like raw recruits, there were 43 Kabilius of the largest class, and of all bnes some of which were bountiful, while others were gargeous to look upon. These were carried in front and rear and on both sides of the Catafalque —besides numerous small Kahilis.
